

Networks with different densities for the visitor take ownership of this new public space in its own way

Some spaces are stable meshes on which we walk on without being deformed. Others are simple cables, where we can move in equilibrium at more than 10 m above the ground to obtain high thrilling sensations, and the last cables are slightly elastic and become a playground on which we can bounce on. Hence, the site would have a life in all seasons and even at night, and will continue to live, to create electricity, and be repairable.