

POSTULATE II SALUTATION OF A CITY

I have always liked the idea of the same edifice in two cities (The Statue of Liberty, Arc de Triomphe, etc.) It is a strong poetic image of two cities saluting each other, of their mutual respect and joint perseverance through years and centuries. I have never, however, heard of one city saluting all the others through symbolic respect of their existence, perseverance, and, ultimately, their shared ideas. The realization of this idea would be, naturally, almost impossible to conduct due to the fact that the edifice to represent the salutation and symbolic respect would be infinitely complex. We have, however, developed an idea of one city saluting all the others through something that exists everywhere, but is still authentic. This "something" is Constellation Orion – one of the most famous constellations that can be seen from almost everywhere in the World. Our installation is the reflection of this constellation on Earth – the same reflection that exists in the Sky and thus in every city. Copenhagen, through this representation of nature, opens, through a big, hieratic salutation, a new mono-dialogue with its brothers, neighbors and other ontological and mythical beings that compose the essences, but also the physical constitutions of other cities.
